dry, or a slight discharge, thin and acrid, afterwards thick and adhesive, may ensue.

As the disease becomes chronic, the discharges are lecreased in quantity and changed in quality; they are now thick and heavy, and are hawked or coughed off. The secretions are offender, causing a bad breath; the sense of smell is lessened or destroyed; dea ness frequently takes place.

Another common and important symptom of Catarrh is that the person is obliged to clear his throat in the morning of a slick or simy mucous, which has failen from the head during the night. When this takes place, the person may be sure that his disease is on its way to the lungs, and should loose no time in arresting it.

The above are but a few of the many Catarrhal symptoms. Write to our Laboratory for our pampiled describing fully all symptoms; it will be sent FEEE to any address. Also directions where to
